

How should a battery room be designed?

Battery rooms shall be designed with an adequate exhaust system which provides for continuous ventilation of the battery room to prohibit the build-up of potentially explosive hydrogen gas. During normal operations, off gassing of the batteries is relatively small.

How to ventilate a battery room?

The battery room shall be ventilated by means of two exhaust fans (one working + one standby). The standby fan should start automatically in case the other fails. Each fan shall have an independent failure alarm. The fan shall be mounted as high as possible in the wall, but not below the level of the light fittings.

Should a battery room be used as a storeroom?

Battery rooms should not be used as storerooms, particularly for storing combustible or flammable materials. Battery rooms and the workplaces should always be kept clean, tidy and dry. Rubbish and waste produced should be removed regularly. Personal belongings of the workers should be kept in lockers instead of being scattered around the workplace.

Do recombinant batteries need ventilation?

Also since the hydrogen released to the surroundings is highly flammable and explosive; these types of batteries must be installed in a sufficiently ventilated room. Most industry codes specify 6 air-changes per hour in the battery room. We will learn more on ventilation later in this course. Recombinant cells have a starved or gelled electrolyte.

Does a battery room need a ventilation system?

The ventilation system for the battery room shall be separate from ventilation systems for other spaces. Air recirculation in the battery room is prohibited. Exhaust air through a dedicated exhaust duct system if the battery room is not located on an outside wall.

Should battery rooms be compartmentalized?

Fire Compartmentalization Issues: Battery rooms should be isolated from each other into fire compartmentalized rooms, away from each other and other equipment and staffing areas by a fire wall rated at two hours.
