

What are the different types of magnetizers/demagnetizers?

The types of magnetizers/demagnetizers include a pen type for use in narrow spaces and local areas such as punched parts of press dies and blades attached to machine tools, a table type used for removing residual magnetism of large workpieces, and more. There is also a combined type of a magnetizer and a demagnetizer.

What is a magnetizer / demagnetizer?

Magnetizers/demagnetizers are a general term for an energy supply device that magnetizes a permanent magnet to create a high magnetic field, or a machine that extracts magnetism from a magnetized magnetic material. Used for magnetizing and demagnetizing work tools such as drills and end mills, blades, and centering bars.

What is a magnetiser & how does it work?

Magnetisers operate with the ability to magnetise and demagnetise metal tools and items, such as blades, nails, and screwdrivers. Electronic equipment, such as printed circuit boards (PCB) and sensitive computer parts, are at risk of being damaged by items which may have a magnetic field.
