What is green steel?

Fastmarkets, an industry-leading cross-commodity price reporting agency (PRA), will launch a new suite of green steel prices today, 8 June. Green steel, also known as low-carbon emission or sustainable steel, refers to the production of steel using environmentally friendly and energy-efficient processes that minimize carbon dioxide (CO₂) emissions.

What is a high purity nickel strip used for?

1. High Purity Nickel Strip is ideal for spot welding of lithium battery pack. 2. Spot Welding Nickel Sheet is mainly used as battery connection sheet, lead-out sheet. 3.

Is green steel sustainable?

This makes it a much more sustainable option than traditional steel production, which accounts for around 7% of global greenhouse gas emissions. Also called sustainable or eco-friendly steel, green steel is a new way of making steel that aims to have the least amount of impact on the environment throughout its full lifecycle.

What are green steel benchmarks?

Our new green steel benchmarks will assess the price differential against traditional flat steel prices, creating transparency for the industry and supporting the investment decisions needed to reduce emissions. These prices are a world first and serve an important need - demand for sustainable steel continues to grow.

How to make steel more environmentally friendly?

To achieve this, it is necessary to switch from processes that use fossil fuels to cleaner ones, such as direct reduction iron (DRI) that runs on hydrogen or electric arc furnaces that use renewable energy. Using green energy cuts down on carbon emissions, which makes the process of making steel more environmentally friendly.

How is the green steel base price calculated?

A daily inferred green steel base price will also be calculated based on the Fastmarkets HRC index and the green steel differential to provide real-time transparency.
